

CRI Establishes HSPD-12 Laboratory

McLean, VA – December 22, 2006 – Communications Resource, Inc. (CRI) today announced that it has set up a production version of a Homeland Security Presidential Directive-12 (HSPD-12) system to demonstrate the end-to-end process in a live environment. The system will enable Federal agencies to enroll and credential employees and contract personnel under the rigorous requirements established by the National Institute for Science and Technology. All components in this configuration are on GSA's Approved Product List. The demonstration model is set up in CRI's McLean, VA location.

CRI is a value added reseller for a wide-variety of security hardware and software products to protect Federal facilities and staff. CRI's business process experts and IT professionals now complement this grass roots security experience by providing customers with high-quality, custom solutions to achieve compliance with HSPD-12. CRI has the capability either to implement an all-encompassing end-to-end solution or to close the gaps in agencies' existing security infrastructure.

CRI has the breadth of understanding to address the identity proofing, credentialing and access control requirements from the varied perspectives of agency Information Technology, Security and Human Resources staffs. CRI's holistic integration approach custom weaves the strict technical and procedural requirements of this program into each agency's unique organizational fabric.

About HSPD-12: "A Common Identification Standard for Federal Employees and Contractors" mandates a program that combines rigorous procedural and technical measures to authenticate and protect the identity of Federal employees and contract personnel.

About CRI

CRI is an SBA certified 8(a), woman-owned, small disadvantaged business providing Technology, Security and Business solutions to its Federal customers.
